HEIDI WOOD

He refused to submit to the indignity of sandals.

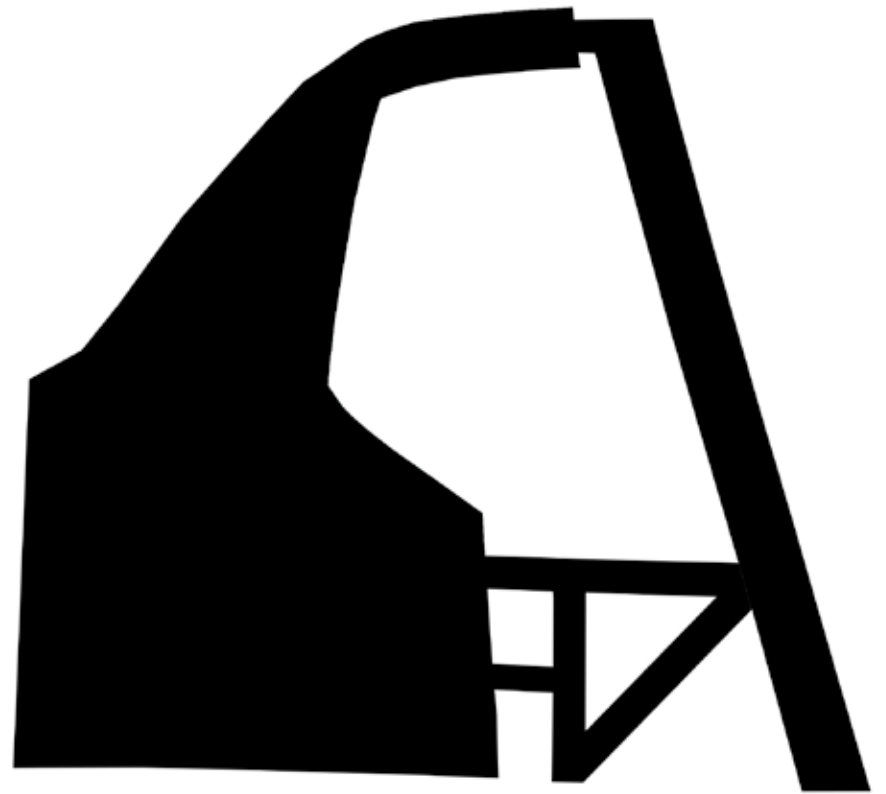

He checked the guidebook and confirmed that Montreux was dull.

He tried and failed to give up gluten.

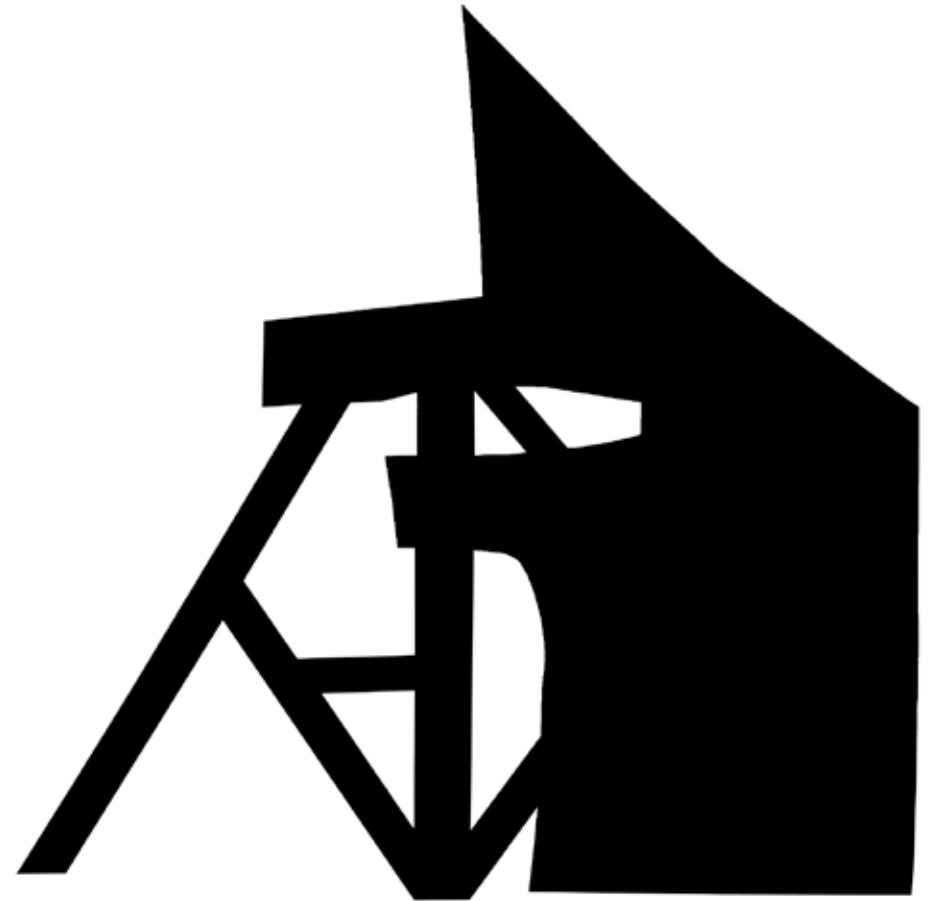

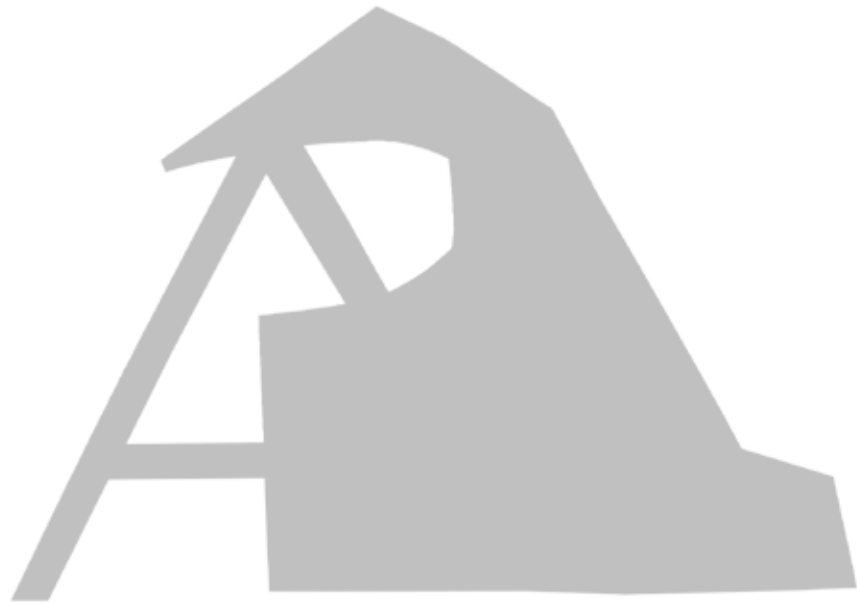

He developed phobias and began to look like a dug-up mole.

He mocked American audiences for always leaping to their feet for a standing ovation.

He confused his right to custody of the children and his right to live beyond his means.

He needed to sculpt three new lumpy bits by lunch.
